WILL ASK "DIXIE" ABOUT 8 MURDERS; IN TIGHT SPOT

Knew When Arrested He Was Sought As Brains of Numbers Racket

IS GREATLY SURPRISED

Extremely Uncomfortable As Surprise Information Is Sprung

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 5.—(INS)—"Dixie" Davis was in a tighter spot today than he had imagined. The disbarred lawyer and fugitive from justice knew when he was arrested here that District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey of New York sought him as brains of New York's $100,000 numbers racket.

What he probably did not know was that Dewey will question him about eight murders.

The once dapper "Dixie" was extremely uncomfortable when the surprise information was sprung yesterday, as he sought his freedom on lower bond and his habeas corpus put over until Monday.

Miss Zula Warrick Is Showered With Presents

The young women employed in the offices of Prudential Life Insurance Company of this district, tendered a surprise miscellaneous shower Thursday evening to Miss Zula Warrick, Newport Road, an employee of the Bristol office. The party was held at the home of Miss Pearl Patterson and Miss Isabel Keeler, Burlington, N. J., and the guests were present when Miss Warrick arrived. She was presented with an old-fashioned bouquet of red flowers, to which was attached red ribbon streamers. At the bottom of each streamer was a note containing a verse, telling her where gifts were hidden. The evening was spent playing games. A delicious repast was served.

Those attending: the Misses Hilda Thieson, Ruth Carman, Jane Thompson, Margaret Abbott, Pearl Patterson, Isabel Keeler, Louise Adams, Burlington, N. J.; Miss Ann Ryan, Moorestown, N. J.; Miss Ann Grovatt, Mt. Holly, N. J.; Miss White, Riverside, N. J.

BRISTOL LEADS COUNTY IN MARRIAGE LICENSES

There Were Ten Applicants From Borough During The Month of January

QUAKERTOWN SECOND

Bristol again lead all other communities in Bucks County in the number of applicants for marriage licenses during the month of January. The number from this borough was ten. Quakertown had six and Doylestown five.

Although all returns have not been received, those on record show that approximately 75 per cent of the couples granted marriage licenses were married at a civil ceremony.

Thirteen of the 198 applicants in January had been divorced, eight men and five women.

Forty-one different trades and professions were noted among the male applicants in January, with professional men far in the minority. Only two farmers were granted licenses. Automobile mechanics, machine workers, truck drivers and hosiery workers were out in front.

One short of 100 couples were granted marriage licenses in Bucks county during the month of January, and incidentally the total of 99 granted was just one short of last year's January business of an even 100.

Records in the office of the Clerk of Orphans' Court, at Doylestown, where the marriage licenses are granted, show that close to 70 per cent of the applicants in January came from places outside of Bucks county, Philadelphia and New Jersey towns and cities furnishing most of the applicants, although there were six States represented among the total number.

Some of the occupations of the other male applicants included aircraft worker, shipper, college instructor, candymaker, draftsman, presser, acetylene burner, retired (2), two steel workers, two chauffeurs, student, three salesmen, moulder, beautician, janitor, baker, blacksmith, cook, florist, two police officers, a milkman, one innkeeper, printer, meat cutter, optician, electrician, one merchant, a waiter, one gardener, one barber, a tree surgeon, an accountant and one railroad.

Only one male applicant was listed as "unemployed," his partner being a hosiery worker.

There was no great disparity in the ages of the applicants receiving licenses last month.

Because of the three-day law the large majority of the licenses are not applied for in person at the marriage licenses bureau but are gotten by Justices of the Peace, before whom the applicants appear to order their license.

Only three of the male applicants and eight of the female applicants were under 21.

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY

Quakertown sewer rental rates were raised approximately 60 per cent when an ordinance adopted by Council established a new schedule of charges, the proportionate increase being figured on the assumption that the rentals will be paid within 90 days from date of issue.

In other words, a private home, formerly assessed at $3.00 per annum, according to the new rate will be charged $10.00, as of March 1st, with the allowance of 50 per cent discount if paid before May 31st of this year.

The private home fee is singled out as an example, the increase affecting all other classifications likewise.

Children, grandchildren and a few friends on Saturday evening attended a dinner which was served in celebration of the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Milton M. Myers at their home in Dublin.

United in marriage on January 28, 1888, at a quiet ceremony performed at the home of the parents of Mrs. Meyers by the Rev. Samuel Godshalk, one of the ministers of the Deep Run Old Mennonite church, the bride and groom of fifty years ago were the guests of honor at the gathering which was featured by the serving of a chicken dinner.

Submitting a report at the annual meeting of the Ottsville Dairymen's Association, the secretary, Alexander Wittig, stated that during the past year farmers living in the locality brought to the creamery slightly less than two million pounds of milk, and from this 84,000 pounds of butter, which was sold for $34,000 at an average price of 40½ cents a pound, was made.

By a vote of eighteen to fourteen, the Silverdale Fire Company members at their monthly meeting Tuesday evening decided not to purchase a new fire truck at the present time.

An increase of $26.25, compared with that of last year, has been noted by the New Hope Chapter of the American Red Cross which recently completed its annual Red Cross roll call and found it amounted to $466.30 for 1937.

This represents an enrollment of 354 members against 325 for 1937. Mrs. Frederick B. Sanson, Solebury, states. In response to Red Cross appeals for food relief, the community contributed $608.45, also clothing and canned goods which were given through the schools.

HIGH SCHOOL SEXTET WINS EASILY AT TRENTON

Bristol Girls Win 4th Straight Game Over Mute Girls' Team

FINAL SCORE 33 TO 14

By Louis Tomlinson

TRENTON, Feb. 5.—To even the count for the loss of the boys' games to the Deaf School, Bristol High's sextet achieved its fourth straight win over the Mute Girls in the last two years, when they again downed them on the West Trenton floor last night, 33-14.

And once again it was that ace pair of forwards, Peg Phipps and Mary Eckert, on the local outfit that achieved the scoring honors when they hit the cords for a combined total of 25 points or more than enough to beat the home six themselves. In fact Phipps counted enough points to tie the Deaf girls alone. Peg chalked up her tallies on a quietest of field goals and a quarter of foul shots in as many tries from the 15-foot mark. At the same time, Mary Eckert scored five foul goals in nine shots and to this she added a trio of twin counters to give her a total of 11 points for close to a half million chicks within the next few weeks. Hundreds of thousands of eggs have been placed in incubators and this year's crop of chicks will again place Bucks county among the leaders in the East.

The Sayre Hatchery near Doylestown has an incubator capacity of 72,000, but at the present time is not running full capacity. There are 25,000 eggs now in the Sayre incubators, however, and larger hatches may be placed later.

At the William Lynch "Forest Poultry Farm," near Chalfont, where there are 5000 grown leghorns laying approximately 2500 eggs a day, 21,000 eggs have been placed in the incubator house, and a hatch of 65 percent is anticipated. Eggs from the Lynch farm are shipped to Philadelphia and the Bucks county auction weekly.

Bucks county's largest hatcheries however are located at Newtown and Feasterville. The Feasterville hatchery operated by George Hess has an incubator capacity of more than 100,000 chicks while the Taylor Brothers' hatchery at Newtown has an incubator capacity of 100,000 chicks. There are 5800 laying hens on the Taylor Brothers' farm at the present time.

NAME ASSISTANT FARM AGENT FOR BUCKS COUNTY

William H. Wilson Appointed By Executive Committee of Farm Bureau

ASSUMES HIS DUTIES

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 5.—Announcement was made today by County Agent William F. Greenawald that at a meeting of the executive committee of the Bucks County Agricultural Extension Association, Wednesday afternoon, William H. Wilson, of Blair Mills, Huntingdon county, was appointed Assistant County Extension Agent, his time being divided between Bucks and Montgomery counties.

Assistant County Agent William H. Wilson is a graduate of Penna. State College, class of '34, where he specialized in agricultural education. He was formerly associated with the Doylestown branch of the Norristown Production Credit Association.

Since leaving the credit association, and prior to becoming Assistant County Agent, Mr. Wilson was affiliated with the U. S. Department of Agriculture in farm security administration. Mr. Wilson, who will reside in Doylestown, was presented to the group by J. M. Fry, Assistant Director of Extension of Pennsylvania.

The meeting was held at the Doylestown Inn, and Amos Satterthwaite, of Yardley, presided. About 20 men and women, members of the county executive committee, attended.

W. Brooke Ball, formerly Assistant County Agent of Bucks, Lehigh and Northampton counties, will now serve as the Assistant County Agent of Lehigh and Northampton counties.

The territory was reduced so that Assistant County Agent Ball can devote all his time in the two counties.

Interesting Projects Are Sponsored in Latin Class

Ninth and tenth grade Latin students of Bristol high school, under direction of the instructor, John Burris, have turned in to classes some excellent pieces in a project in connection with this subject.

Mosaics have been made of small pieces of clay to represent stones, formed into various designs representing Roman characters and sayings. A cross-section of Caesar's fortifications, which portray the towers, wall, ditch, and ambush, has been completed by Ferdinand Monus of the 9-1 section, and by Virginia Vetter of 10-A-1.

Walter Hardy has made a cross-section of Caesar's bridge across the Rhine; John Melldoe, of 10-A-1, a Roman amphitheatre; Margaret Rathke, 9-1, a lamp of clay; Joseph Quigley, a Trojan column.

The display of Francis Clotti of 9-1 section is an olive press; and that of John Cherubini is a model of the Pantheon.

Soap, wax, metal, wood, cement, etc., have been used by the high school pupils in this project.

Bristol, Croydon Lads Hurt in Two-Car Crash

A Croydon and a Bristol youth were hurt early yesterday morning, when two cars crashed head-on at Knight Road, Somerton.

Those injured from this section are: William Haldeman, 16, Bristol; and Walter Kirstein, 17, Croydon. The others who were riding in the second car, and who were hurt, are: James King, 23, Torresdale; and Theodore Eisenhart, 20, of Philadelphia. The former suffered internal injuries, and injuries to his nose. The two Bucks Countians were cut and bruised.

Treatment was given at Frankford Hospital.

Tokyo, Feb. 5.—Any suggestions that Japan will be willing to comply with the request made by the United States, Britain and France for information regarding Nippon's naval building plan is "impossible," an official of the navy ministry here announced today.

He stated that to comply with such a request would merely be a step "back toward the yoke of 5-5-3 ratio system," and this he declared was out of the question.

Forced Daughter to Hide Child

Uniontown, Feb. 5.—A 69-year-old grandfather, a prosperous farmer, today was charged with forcing his daughter to hide her crippled illegitimate daughter for six years in a second-floor storage room on his farm "as a sort of punishment for her second sin."

The first "sin," said the grandfather, David Harris, is a seven-year-old boy, Harris's daughter, Martha, 27, told investigators the father of both children was an 80-year-old Perry Township farmer. The crippled child, her body torn with rickets, lay wedged on the back of an old-fashioned rocking chair, the legs of which had been removed.

Ten Seniors Named For National Honor Society

Ten seniors of Bristol high school, which group comprises 10 per cent of the class, have been chosen for membership in the National Honor Society.

This is an annual custom—the selection of 10 per cent for membership in the society. In order to be eligible, a student must be in the upper third of the class as far as scholastic rating is concerned. They are judged on service, character and leadership. Voting is done by faculty, old members of the organization, and the candidates.

Those just chosen for the honor membership are: the Misses Julia Houser, Mollie Wright, Helen Simon, Wilhelmina Peters, Doris Mershon, Sarayam Bassett; Messrs. Melvin Fry, Ralph Hart, William Roberts, Jack Spencer.

During their junior year, five per cent of this year's senior class were chosen for membership in the organization.

"Raffia" is Subject For Cub Scout Craft Session

Neighborhood Commissioner Joseph Kish and Scoutmaster George Bloch were instructors at the February gathering of the upper area Scouting leaders for the training university, Thursday evening, in Doylestown.

Mr. Kish demonstrated and taught the Cub leaders in the Cub craft course on the subject of "raffia." Scoutmaster Bloch was the instructor in the same course on "clothes pin novelties."

Both of the subjects will be used by the Cub leaders of the upper area of the Council in teaching their Cubs to make greater use of their hands.

Croydon Youth Shot While Cleaning Rifle

A 19-year-old boy, Charles Myers, First avenue, Croydon, accidentally shot himself in the left shoulder yesterday afternoon as he cleaned the 22-calibre rifle of his brother.

Myers, according to Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo, was in his bedroom. He took the gun of his brother and started to clean it, not being aware that it was loaded. The firearm was discharged and the shot struck the youth in the left shoulder.

Bucks County Rescue Squad took Myers to Dr. Wagner's Hospital. It is thought that the wound will not prove to be serious.

FEDERATED CLUBS ARRANGE PROGRAM

Spring Session To Be Held at Summerseat in Morrisville

FRIDAY, APRIL 29TH

An interesting program is being arranged for the Spring meeting of the Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs, which will be held at Morrisville, Friday morning and afternoon, April 29th. The sessions will be held in Summerseat, Morrisville's Home Economics building.

To the two women's clubs in the county which show the most outstanding work in connection with promoting highway safety, prizes of $10 and $5 will be presented by the federation.

The club women are also discussing the ways and means of extending this program, such as safety patrol systems in all schools, the making of safety posters in the schools, safety programs for clubs, discussion of causes of accidents, the importance of having local ordinances prohibiting children from riding on handlebars of bicycles and procuring co-operation of managers of motion picture houses by showing pictures on highway safety.

With the slogan, "Know Pennsylvania First, Then Make Pennsylvania First," arrangements are made to procure interesting and valuable historical information as Bucks County's share in the State club project in fine arts, which covers writers, literary shrines, libraries, little theatres, musicians, dancers, painters and craftsmen, mural paintings, stained glass windows, bridges, sculptures, monuments and markers and foundations.

Mrs. Daniel H. Erdman, Quakertown, chairman of scholarship, reports the fine work being done in assisting worthy students through college and of plans to continue the work.

Hulmeville Woman Dies In 78th Year of Age

HULMEVILLE, Feb. 5.—An aged Hulmeville resident, Mrs. Alice McStay Hill, died yesterday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Anna Cousins, Main street. She was in her 78th year.

Mrs. Hill, the widow of William C. Hill, had been ill for some time.

In addition to her daughter, Mrs. Hill is survived by two sisters and a brother, namely: Mrs. Conn, Mrs. Rogers and David Martin, all of Philadelphia. The deceased was the daughter of the late John Charles and Jane Stevenson Martin. She was born in New York.

The Rev. Robert H. Comly, pastor of Neshaminy Methodist Church, will conduct the funeral service on Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, from the home of Mrs. Cousins, daughter of the deceased. Burial will be in charge of Charles Haefner, funeral director, and will occur in Cedar Hill Cemetery, Philadelphia. Friends may call Monday evening.

SUGGEST ONE-WAY STREETS TO RELIEVE MILL ST. CONDITION

Borough Officials Have Made Survey and Are Working Out Plan

CONDITION DANGEROUS

Believe Scheme Will Solve The Problem in Business Section

Bristol's traffic problem is being studied by borough officials with a view to relieving the congestion which exists in the principal shopping district in the borough.

A survey has just been made by Burgess, Clifford L. Anderson; borough engineer, John S. Roberts, Jr.; chief of police, Linford J. Jones; chairman of street and highway committee, William W. Warner; chairman of police committee, Richard T. Myers; and engineers of the Keystone Automobile Club.

A preliminary survey has been made of Mill street and the suggestion has been made that one-way traffic in this street may prove the ultimate solution of the congestion problem.

"One-way traffic has been found to be effective in controlling congestion in other cities and towns," it is stated. "All drivers having business in the shopping area suffer under present conditions which are aggravated by double parking on Mill street, often blocking completely the movement of traffic."

The group spent several hours looking over the traffic situation, with particular reference to parking.

The opinion was expressed and generally concurred in that if Mill street and possibly Market street were made one-way thoroughfares many of the traffic difficulties now experienced would be corrected. However, it is not definitely decided that such measures would solve the problem.

Enforcement of regulations against double parking has been a major factor in correcting of similar conditions in other towns. It has been learned. Limited parking is another factor to be considered, although in the view of the group this could be deferred pending a study following inauguration of one-way streets.

It is generally agreed, however, that co-operation of motorists and business men is the first essential in the successful working-out of any traffic plan. Conditions are such that some concrete plan will have to be worked out and put into effect. Traffic through the business area is hazardous and one of the chief dangers is the blocking of traffic in case of an emergency.

Borough officials are well aware of the condition which might exist should firemen be summoned to a blaze during peak traffic periods. It would be exceedingly difficult to get fire apparatus to points of vantage, through the disorganized traffic as it now operates along Mill street.

Considerable thought is being given to the subject and it is the aim of the borough authorities that once a conclusion has been reached that the plan adopted will be the best one to meet the conditions as they exist at the time.

The safety factor as it pertains to human life is one of

PRESERVING FREEDOM

One of the most eloquent voices that have ever spoken in warm friendship across the Canada-United States border is that of John Bassett, president of the Gazette, Montreal, a newspaper which was founded 160 years ago by Benjamin Franklin.

In an address at the recent annual dinner of the Canadian Society in New York, Mr. Bassett issued a ringing plea that the great democracies of the English-speaking world make a common stand for the preservation of freedom, that it shall not perish from the earth.

An audience of distinguished men and women of this country, Canada and Great Britain rose and cheered the Canadian publisher when he drove home the point that "the task for democracies such as yours and ours is to act in common to preserve and, if it is necessary, to defend the most precious possession of mankind—freedom—without which death itself would be a priceless boon."

While Mr. Bassett does not urge an alliance of the two great democracies, the British Empire and the United States, against the totalitarian states of the world, since such rigid lining up of ideologies, one against the other would in the end lead to conflict, he does urge that both great commonwealths of English-speaking nations adopt a united attitude "in this turbulent world of strong well-armed resolve, without threats and provocation and with friendship toward all nations."

"That attitude should insist that there are limits which must be observed in the interests of mankind. Such a policy, practical and yet ideal, would ensure that liberty shall not perish from this earth and generations yet unborn shall rise up and call us blessed."

"Today the most cherished ideal of all English-speaking peoples, towards which men have struggled and for which they have poured out 'the red sweet wine of youth' is being trampled in the mud and the mire by a Caesarism as ruthless as it is cruel."

SEED CATALOG THOUGHTS

The traditional indoor sport of February evenings in many homes consists in study of the seed catalog. The gardener is thrilled by the wonderful pictures of glorified dahlias and roses and tomatoes and cabbages which he thinks he is going to raise.

In many cases he does raise them, and lives longer in consequence. Perhaps his enthusiasm will flag when spring fever comes on. Even if he gets his seeds well planted, he may be too tired to weed and water them next July. Anyway, he has turned his thought toward the most ancient and wholesome activity of men.

The old tradition had it that when God created Adam, He gave him the job of cultivating a garden. There was every chance of happiness there until the serpent entered. Today you can find happiness in a garden, but some more or less serpent-like desires try to entice you out of it.

Lesson No. 1 in politics: Learn which big shot the people hate most and tell them the same villain is fighting you.

Immediate danger of an overwhelming prosperity was soon averted. A sit-down boom would be a paradox.

"Women In Love" by May Christie

CHAPTER XXVIII

"You—you look terribly serious. Is anything the matter?" Ann stammered.

"I'm afraid so. You were wanted yesterday afternoon by Mr. Weiss in his office."

She thought: "Calamities never come singly! As though it weren't bad enough about poor Claire!"

She said aloud: "I had to go home on an urgent family matter. Sudden illness." She hated fibbing, but never must Paul Bradley know Claire's narrow escape. Whatever trouble might be brewing for herself, her family must be protected, cost what it might.

"Did you know," asked Paul, "that our competitors are offering, at a much lower price, the identical line of lingerie that you purchased through O'Hallahan? That it's selling hand over fist, while you're stuck with your commission?"

"I knew that special line hasn't been doing well in my department this past ten days, but the reason was beyond me," replied Ann. "The silk's like-wise—and the cut's excellent. It's never to me that a rival store has it at reduced prices. Perhaps a sale?"

"No."

"Then why—?" She broke off. Why was he staring at her so, with accusation in his eyes?

"You've been favoring O'Hallahan to the exclusion of other textile manufacturers. That's bad policy. It lays one open to criticism."

"I'm terribly sorry. I bought from him because I considered I got the best value from him for the store."

"And now you're stuck with goods you can't get rid of. Mr. Weiss is very much upset about it, especially as we've given such space to this line in the advertising—fruitless lay-outs and all."

"What can I do?" asked Ann helplessly. "Shall I offer the salesgirls a commission? Take a markdown? Or what?"

"The rent of your department is far from being negligible, appraised as it is at so much per square foot. It occupies a considerable area in the best location in the store. You have extra lights, as in this salon, which make expenses higher. Recently, too, some of the other buyers have been feeling that you have been favored in the matter of space in the advertising. Therefore, legitimately, your running schedule has no margin for costly markdowns—or for shop-lifting," he added.

Now Ann already knew there was a certain margin for stealing in the store. Despite the detectives and their vigilance, merchandise sometimes failed to tally in the various departments, and losses of that sort were put down to shop-lifters.

But she had never experienced it in the Lingerie section.

"Shop-lifting?" she echoed.

He said, almost irritably: "Oh, I know you haven't had troubles yet in the matter of theft." He was thinking of Brenda Selz in the Gift Shop, and how she was continually complaining things were being stolen. Much of her more expensive wares were small enough to be accidentally (?) caught in a cuff sleeve, to be shipped into a glove opening or covered with a handkerchief. The worries of a merchandise manager are as the sands of the Sahara. And he was worried, this morning.

"So Mr. Weiss wants to see me?"

"Is he here now? Shall I go right up to his office?" asked Ann.

"He isn't in yet. He'll send for you when he wants you. I came to prepare you for an interview that maybe—unpleasant. He was almost choleric yesterday about what he considers is an inexcusable blunder on your part. In fact," said the merchandise manager, worriedly, "it's only fair to tell you he was quite prepared to let you go yesterday."

"I had a talk with him, however. Not that it, apparently has had much result."

Ann's quiet dignity did not desert her in this situation, even though the whole world seemed to be toppling about her ears. To be fired from the job that meant so much to her and to her family! Worse still, to lose contact with the man who had told her that he loved her—whom she loved achingly—and who now was treating her as though nothing beyond the ordinary civilities of store life had ever passed between them. It was as though he had a dual personality. But pride helped her. She summoned it forcefully.

Where a weaker or more designing character would have traded—or attempted trading—on their more delicate relationship outside the store, Ann's manner was completely business-like, detached, as she told the merchandise manager that certainly she would resign if her services were no longer wanted.

"Don't do that. The first human gleam came into the fine eyes. 'Mr. Weiss is temperamental. He gets exaggerated notions in his head as to the reasons motivating his executives. In moments of anger, or of worry, his imagination flies off at a tangent. His suspicions run ahead of him.'"

This was cryptic information. Exactly what was he trying to convey to her?

She was suspected of something over and above being an incompetent buyer! He was skirting round it, hesitating to come out in the open!

Why?

Because of his feeling for her? Or because of the transient emotion that a flirtation with a pretty girl had brought out?

Ann felt that she hated everybody. Specially loathed Paul Bradley at that moment. His maxim as to business and love not mixing came back to her forcibly.

"If Mr. Weiss will have the courtesy to tell me what he actually suspects me of, then I shall have an opportunity to clear myself," said Ann.

She couldn't resist adding, because she was so hurt that everything churned inside her: "Not that women usually get a square deal from men if trouble has to be put on someone or other."

"Is that fair?"

"Is life fair to women?" Ann asked hotly.

"It's their own fault if it isn't," retorted Paul Bradley.

He was thinking of what Herman Weiss had told him yesterday, about Ann being in a box at the Opera with Tim O'Hallahan. How she had fooled him, pulled the wool over his eyes, assuring him that she declined Tim's invitation, and the very next night, after his declaration in the taxicab, flaunted herself in public with Tim!

"Meaning," asked Ann icily, and quite forgetting their respective positions, "that women are unreliable, and totally unable to meet men on their own ground?"

"Yes—since you're asking for it. That's my personal opinion."

They glared at one another.

"That's too utterly absurd! You know perfectly that the sheltered woman is quite out of date," Ann retorted. "And a good riddance too, for the world no longer offers a shelter for women. Even when she marries, what guarantee has any girl today that she's going to be supported or protected? She's simply got to stand on her own feet."

"But she doesn't. She uses other weapons. Plays with fire like a boy, and then yells if she's burned."

What was he driving at? Should she ask him outright? But hadn't he scathingly said that the greatest fault of women was in turning the story to their own personal angle?

Yet she couldn't resist it.

"With which particular fire am I concerned, pray?"

"I should advise you to find out and stop playing with it. Otherwise—well—a fire has a way of destroying one."

Was it a threat? She hadn't played with him. She had been in dead earnest. He must know that.

Ramesses, the window-dresser, appeared at the door of the salon, asking Mr. Bradley and the Lingerie buyer please to come for a preview of his handiwork.

But, shaking his head, the merchandise manager strode out to the main floor and the elevators, and so up to his own office.

It was a terrible morning for Ann.

The axe was hanging . . . but, infinitely worse than the loss of a job she valued, was the detached, cold attitude of one she had trusted implicitly, believed every word of love he had spoken.

If this change of demeanor towards her were prompted by her error of judgment in buying, then surely it was inordinately harsh? Unjustified?

No one was infallible, least of all a girl who had never done a lucrative hand's turn in her brief existence until her entry less than five months ago into the store.

Not that Ann pitied herself, or asked for any lenience not accorded the other workers. To be summarily condemned for what in her own mind was no blunder, was cruelly harsh on the part of the store owner and his manager.

Paul Bradley, when she had put the question to him in a spirit of sarcasm, had admitted that he considered women unreliable in business, and unable to meet men on their own ground.

It made her furious. He was narrow-minded. It wasn't love she had felt for him in the moonlight, after Il Rocco it was only horrid old Mother Nature working. . . . his good looks and propinquity . . . that was all!

The fleeting suspicion that he was jealous of Tim O'Hallahan at Rosalind's party had gone from her mind. His recent, coldly spoken rebuke against the manufacturer being unduly favored with orders from her came from a business man—her boss, and not her lover. It had no hint of the personal.

How could she know that she had been seen at the Opera with Tim O'Hallahan by the Gift Shop buyer? Her mother's chaperonage was omitted from the story which had been retailed to Herman Weiss?

Nor had Herman's version of her intimacy with the silk manufacturer lacked anything, imaginatively speaking, when yesterday he had summoned the merchandise manager to his office. Herman could insinuate so skillfully that, no matter how one hated his innuendoes, some of the most stuck. Not only for business reasons, but because of family reasons, the store owner had it in for Ann.

First, there had been the question of her sister excluding his daughters from the fashionable card-party, when already they'd invited old acquaintances. Mother and the girls were still yapping about it. And hadn't he lowered his dignity by appealing to the hotel management, who told him there was nothing they could do about it! And the old acquaintances had had the last laugh.

Next, there was Tim O'Hallahan's defection in regard to Becky, his favorite child. Ann Delafield was responsible. She was taking graft, feathering her own nest. Speaking of nests, there might even be a love nest in the offing! This was why the fickle Irishman came seldom now to the palatial Weiss suite!

Not outright did Herman unfold these suspicions to Paul.

But enough was said to shake his trust in Ann Delafield. She had lied to him about refusing invitations. Fooled him over Tim O'Hallahan. That was certain.

Yet feeling died hard.

"I have found her extremely competent and hard-working. Up to now, she has been a most capable buyer," he had told Mr. Weiss.

"Humph!"—incredulously.

"I grant you that her rise has been a rapid one, but I felt I was justified in the promotion."

"Oh, I know you're all for the buyers being young," conceded Herman. He chewed on the end of his cigar. "In my day, we considered that only the years brought experience. Now Miss Selz of the Gift Shop—she's wide awake—no child—"

He looked at Paul. Ought he to let him know that it was through her loyalty he had the goods on the young Lingerie buyer? Or would that be a tactical mistake?

Battle Looms Over New Armament Program

Proposed additions to the army and navy to cost approximately $800,000,000, recommended by President Roosevelt, are expected to arouse major debate in congress on the subject of extent and scope of the United States' foreign policy. A bill introduced by Representative Carl Vinson, chairman of the house naval affairs committee provides for construction of three battleships, two aircraft carriers, eight cruisers, 25 destroyers, nine submarines, 25 auxiliary vessels, 1,000 airplanes, 1,200 officers and 20,000 enlisted men. On the army side the president seeks heavy appropriations to improve anti-aircraft defenses, army reserve corps, army materials and to expand the national guard.

TOURISTS AID TO STATE

SALEM, Ore.—(INS).—The average tourist visiting Oregon this year left the state $34.30 poorer, according to an estimate of the highway department.

The figures were based on a questionnaire which reached about 3,000 tourists from all of the 47 other states and from Canada.

Total expenditures in Oregon for the year by tourists were estimated at twenty million dollars.

LIKE OLD CATTLE DAYS

SILVER LAKE, Ore.—(INS).—Shades of the past were raised briefly when more than a thousand head of cattle, hawling and stamping, passed through Silver Lake.

The herd was driven from the M. S. ranch, one of the largest still remaining in America, to a winter range. It brought back memories of old times to ex-cattlemen here, who remembered when this entire area was devoted to cattle ranches.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1938, King Features Syndicate, Inc. HOLLYWOOD—Judging by the headlines, Hollywood's servant problem is getting no better fast. Fay Wray is threatened by her cook. The Leon Gordons charge their nursemaid with destroying $5,000 worth of gowns and furs.

Then there's the embarrassing experience of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. He recently rented a house in Santa Monica. Being in the middle of a picture ("Joy of Loving"), he had little time to interview servants so he had the applicants come to the studio. At last, he found a housekeeper and told her to go home and prepare a dinner for four.

That night, the star showed up with his cousin, Letisha Fairbanks, Marlene Dietrich and the Earl of Warwick.

They found the house dark and the following note on the door: "This house is too big. I have left."

The Fairbanks party had their dinner at a Hollywood restaurant.

Virginia Field has airplaned east with Vic Orsatti supposed to follow. The Hollywood gossip says it as more than a coincidence.

Make a note of the name, Vera Zorina. She's in the "Goldwyn Follies" and looks like star material. The first lavish revue of 1938 is too long in its present footage, but has the Goldwyn touch and is another boost for color pictures. Most exciting novelty is a ballet featuring Zorina, who is an artist of the dance but who also is an actress of considerable ability and undeniable glamor.

Charlie McCarthy and Bergen make a hit in the film, too, but some of their gags are pretty stale. Most frequently heard comment on the picture: "Why didn't Goldwyn make more use of Phil Baker?"

Rudy Vallee amazed the stay-up-laters at the Cafe Lamaze by bringing his own electric cocktail mixer and his own liquor. He likes a special kind of frozen daiquiri. And, for feminine companionship, he still prefers Gloria Youngblood.

All the late spots are crying about the recession but still offer the tourist's best chance of seeing movie stars. In the Beverly Brown Derby, before the "Goldwyn Follies" preview, Andrea Leeds and Jack Dunn eat a hurried dinner. Anita Louise and Gene Markey are in one booth and, in another, is Anita's mother, and her new groom, Verne Whithead.

Some of the preview crowd go to the Trocadero afterwards to see the De Marcos dance. Joan Crawford, Joseph Mankiewicz and Spencer Tracy at a rindside table. The Clover club also gets its share of the crowd. Alfred Vanderbilt with Margaret Lindsay, Gertrude Niesen with Jon Hall and Tommy Lee. But the twosome that gets the most stares is Paulette Goddard and Pat De Cicco.

The Lyle Talbot have come up with a new party idea. They are issuing summonses to their guests and everybody is supposed to come to the party exactly as they are when the summons is delivered. At least one celeb will have to attend with lather on his face.

Wonder if Hedy Lamarr, star of "Ecstasy", knows that she made an M. G. M. test in the white gown Jean Harlow wore in "Personal Property"?

Note to historians. During her recent visit in Georgia, Margot Grahame made a speech to both houses of the state legislature. Invitation was tendered by Gov. E. D. Rivers.

The picture, "Hurricane", didn't play to unusual business as a road show but is Goldwyn's biggest money-maker on general release. It will be out of the red in seven months. . . . The Basil Rathbones were the movie colony's most consistent visitors at the Wright murder trial. . . . Florence Rice and Nick Grinde also among the celebs seen in the court room. . . . Ann Southern has the flu again. . . . Deanna Durbin will have her foot and hand-prints impressed in the forecourt of the Grauman's Chinese theater. . . . The entire green room arose and applauded James Cagney on his first appearance at the Warner commissary. . . . And the "Home Sweet Home" mat in front of the Dick Arlens' door is a gift from Peggy Hopkins Joyce, of all people.

"See...it's signed by young WASHINGTON"

As early as 1746, the neighbors of young George Washington entrusted the surveying of their fields and forests to the master of Mount Vernon. They could count upon his unswerving honesty. His name upon a map made it an authoritative document.

A good name is no less important today. As you read the advertisements in this newspaper, you see the names of manufacturers and merchants who have builded their business success upon honest products.

The very fact that they advertise speaks for their integrity. The store that stays in business has not only to get customers but to keep them year after year. Your goodwill is worth too much to be endangered by inferior, unsatisfactory goods.

Read the advertisements regularly. They will save you minutes and money. They serve as maps of good merchandise—signed with names which, like the name of Washington, have been tested by many and found completely trustworthy.

RADIO PATROL

DEAF SCHOOL TOPS BRISTOL; SCORE, 53-36

By "Herm" Corn

That same lightning-fast attack which has pronounced the New Jersey School for the Deaf as one of the finest mute quints in the country, was used against Steve Juenger's fighting Bunnies to send them down the defeat road to the tune of 53 to 36 last night.

This is the second time this season the Juengermen fell before an N. J. S. D. scoring avalanche. In the first encounter the New Jersey team, with a pile-driving scoring attack in the second period, rolled up enough tallies to coast through the remainder of the game to win out 35 to 13.

The Red and Grey five played the same snappy brand of basketball they displayed last week, when they broke the tie from Morrisville and took the lead in the Lower Bucks County League. However, all that can be said for last night's loss is that the mutes from N. J. had much better sensational shooting and in general much more deception.

Wilbur Van Lenten was the leading Bunnies to engrave notches on Bristol's account. He bore the butt of the Red and Grey attack throughout the 22 minutes of scrimmage, gathering a dozen points which resulted from five field goals and two charity tosses. Will was third highest scorer below Joe Carnevale, who received the high scoring ribbon of the night and Ed Sorgi. Each laid away six two-pointers and two one charity tosses, respectively, for 14 and 13 points.

Sinking most of his field goals from the 25 foot mark, Capt. Pete De Luca came next with 9 counters. He gathered three field goals and three gift tosses. Pat Capecci, the surprise of the night, followed up with 7 points. He got in the game with about six minutes to play and started his eagle to work. He tucked away three field goals and one foul toss.

One of the most interesting things in this contest was that both teams had a very good average for their foul shooting. The State Capital boys, also, in this case had the edge over the Juengermen, sinking 5 out of 6, as compared to Bristol's 8 out of 12.

BENSALEM GRAPPLERS WIN AT GEORGE SCHOOL

By Louis Tomlinson

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Feb. 5.—Coach George Reimer's Junior Varsity wrestlers had very little trouble in subduing the J. V. outfit from George School in their meet at the Owl's gym yesterday afternoon. Winning five of the six bouts, one on a fall, the Owl grapplers pinned a 17-3 defeat on backs of the visiting aggregation.

Benny Herman started the Owls off on the road to victory with a decision win over his opponent. In the 105 lb. class and George Flemming followed suit. However, Bob Vansant dropped a referee's decision to Bob Swayne who achieved George School's only win of the afternoon and thereby accounted for their three points. Incidentally, this was the best bout of the afternoon as both boys grappled hard but evenly throughout the match.

Henry Killian of Bensalem, picked up where Flemming left off by gaining the nod over Wayne Tarry in the 125 lb. class. Then going after his opponent with no delay whatsoever, Bob Scarborough turned in the only fall of the meet when he pinned Ray Redden in the 135 lb. class in 2:02 to win easily over his opponent. Elwood Filcox put the finishing touches on the meet when he outlasted Jack Eastman in the 145 lb. class for the Owls' fifth triumph in the meet.

On Thursday, February 10, at 4 p. m., the Owls' varsity nine will endeavor to clip the wings of Trenton High again in the return match at Bensalem. On the other hand, Trenton will seek revenge for an early season setback handed them by Reimer's boys.

Summary of the meet:
105 lb. class—Ben Herman, Bensalem, gained a referee's decision over George Redden, George School. Score: Bensalem, 3; George School, 0.
105 lb. class (second bout)—George Flemming of Bensalem won over Jack Gillian, George School, on a referee's decision. Score: Bensalem, 6; George School, 0.

115 lb. class—Bob Swayne, George School, gained the nod over Bob Vansant, Bensalem, on a referee's decision. Score: Bensalem, 6; George School, 3.

125 lb. class—Henry Killian, Bensalem, topped Wayne Tarry, of George School on a referee's decision. Score: Bensalem, 9; George School, 3.

135 lb. class—Bob Scarborough, of Bensalem, pinned Ray Redden, George School, in 2:02 using a double wing lock. Score: Bensalem, 14; George School, 3.

145 lb. class—Elwood Filcox, Bensalem, defeated Jack Eastman, of George School on a referee's decision. Score: Bensalem, 17; George School, 3.

Score by bouts:
George School J. V. 0 0 3 0 0 0—3
Bensalem J. V. 3 3 0 3 5 3—17
Referees: Grimm, George School; Reimer, Bensalem.

REASONS FOR LONGEVITY

PROVINCETOWN, Mass.—(UNS)—A diet from which tea and coffee has been barred was credited by Mrs. Effie Nickerson, Mayflower descendant, for bringing her to her 89th birthday.

"I have never taken a cup of tea or coffee, and I have observed a careful diet and always had plenty of exercise," said Mrs. Nickerson, still able to read without spectacles at her advanced age.

Washington Snapshots

By JAMES PRESTON

Despite a spectre of confusion in other quarters, there is a hopeful sign on the Washington horizon these days. Congress is apparently taking Federal economy seriously.

That the trend is definitely toward reducing the cost of Federal government has been evidenced by recent actions in the Congressional chambers when appropriations for sundry government department operations came up for consideration. In eight instances of late these appropriations have been pared down well below the figure recommended in the President's budget message.

These agencies that will receive less than the executive branch called for are: Social Security Board, the Civilian Conservation Corps, Federal Communications Commission, Federal Power Commission, National Labor Relations Board, National Mediation Board, Rural Electrification Administration and the TVA.

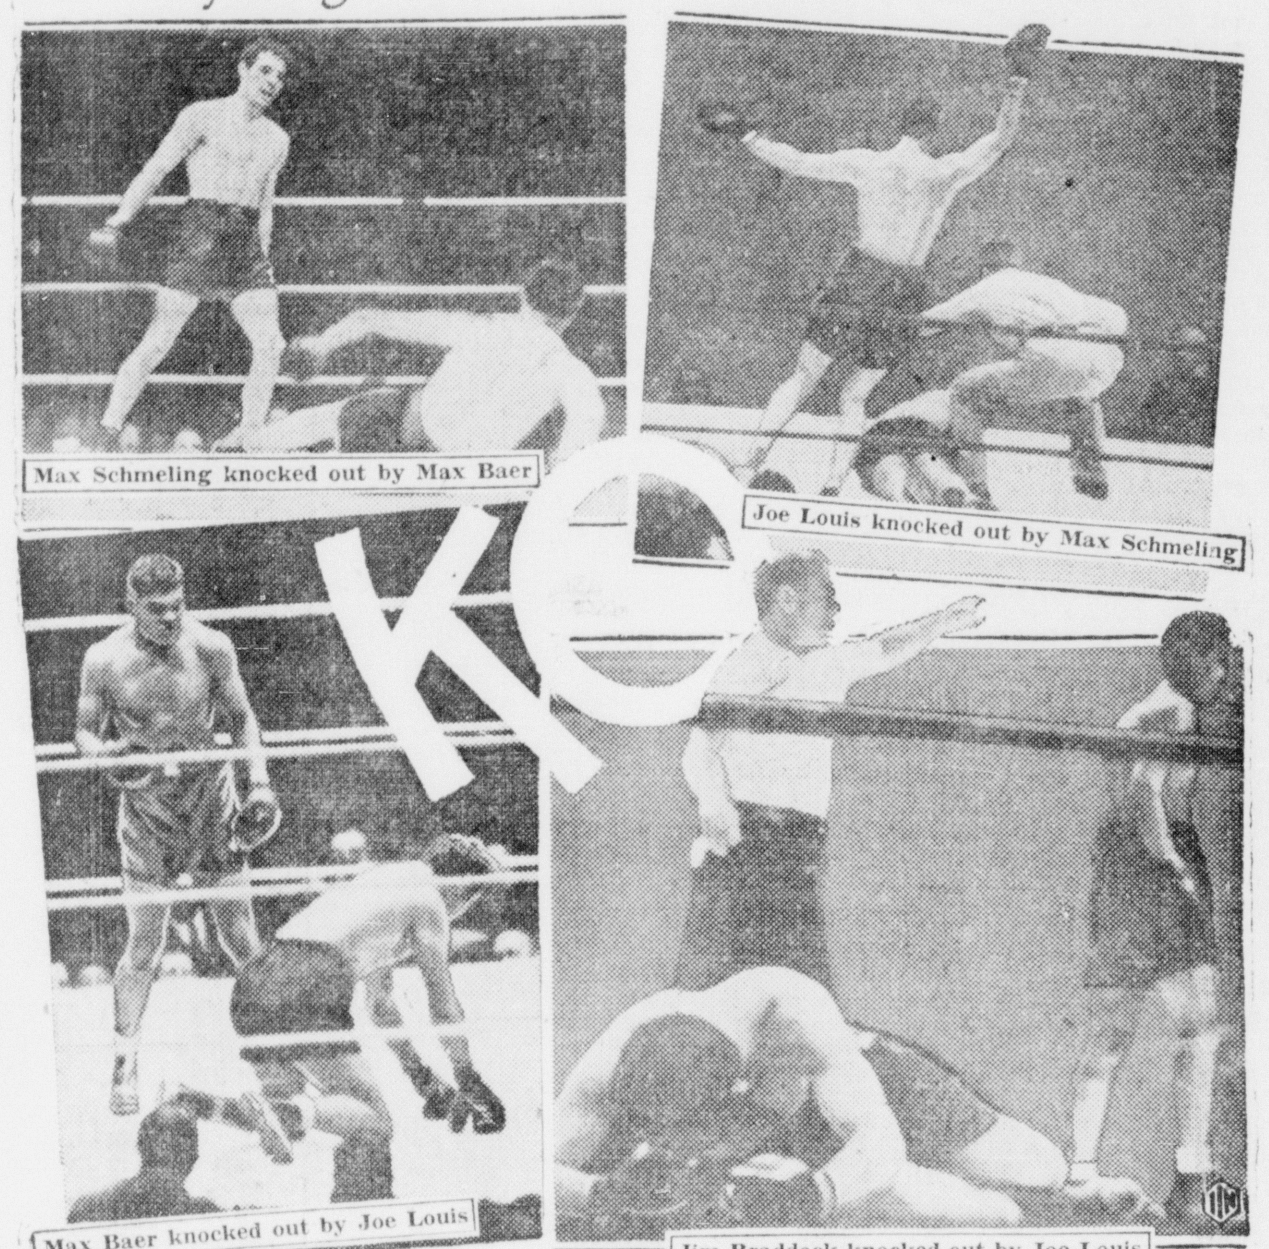

One of the economies effected presents an interesting sidelight on the apparent temperance of the solons and should prove rather conclusively that those on Capitol Hill are sincerely endeavoring to do their part toward reducing Federal expenditures. The slashing was extended right up to the one of the most potent pork

A Heavyweight Is a Man Who Gets Knocked Out

Knockout, knockout, who's next for a knockout? Not only the world's heavyweight champion, Joe Louis, but the leading contenders for the title have been floored for the count. Joe Louis, who is to defend his title against Max Schmeling next summer, was knocked out by the German mauler. But the German himself was knocked out by Max Baer, Joe Louis knocked out Baer and Jimmy Braddock, who previously had defeated Baer. Since Gene Tunney left the ring after a career in which he lost only to Harry Greb, the heavyweight class has not had a consistent performer.

Great Cage Guardian

You would naturally expect the very Scotch Davey Kerr to be frugal. Davey, who guards the nets for the New York hockey Rangers, is almost miserly when it comes to giving goals to the foe.

The acrobatic Ranger goalie has been specializing in shutouts this season, wielding the whitewash brush with an industrious hand.

Kerr, who didn't look so hot when Les Patrick first brought him in to replace Andy Aikenhead, has justified his mentor's confidence, and now rates as the top goal tender in the big show.

Dave has his eye on the Georges Vezina Memorial Trophy, awarded annually to the most effective goalie of the campaign. Barring a last minute collapse, the Ranger ace should achieve this ambition with ease, as he apparently has the shut-out crown in his mitts already.

The record for handing out blank's is eighteen, run up by George Hainsworth of Les Canadiens in the 1925-26 campaign. However, George had the advantage of the then-effective ban on offensive forward passing.
